Joining Crafts, Inc., a Wisconsin based roofing and architectural sheetmetal contractor, is Zach Cropsey. Starting in April, 2016, Cropsey was hired as an estimator/project manager and will be working in the company's Manitowoc office. Cropsey's responsibilities include sales, cost estimate and bid preparation and site visits. In that role, Cropsey works directly with customers to develop the roofing system to best meet their company's individual needs. Of utmost importance are the lasting protection of the building and the staff and equipment within the building.

His role will keep Cropsey involved throughout the entire project. He will be coordinating construction specifications in cooperation with Crafts' supervisors and the supervisors for other contractors working on the building. This is to ensure the roofing system and sheet metal are installed according to the specifications presented in the bid process and will meet the manufacturer's warranty.

Cropsey joins the Crafts estimation/project management team following a successful career in property management, housing development, construction and accounting. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, Cropsey majored in finance.

Crafts, Inc. is celebrating its 70th year in business as a leading innovator in commercial and industrial roofing systems.
